I am using the following code to calculate the gradient magnitude of a window which takes the gradient of each row. `g = array([f(x), f(x+1), f(x+2)])` `x = np.array([0, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9])` `fg = np.sum(g)` `print(fg)` `array([9, 24, 45, 64, 81, 98, 115, 132, 159, 174])` I am using this based on an answer from here. `numpy.abs(fg.reshape(-1).T)` `array([9, 18, 27, 36, 45, 54, 63, 72, 81, 90])` This works fine, the issue is though that this requires an input of tens of thousands of elements, when I can get away with only a few hundreds. To my understanding to get a magnitude of gradient, I would need to multiply each of these rows by -1 and then square. However I am unsure how to create this multiplication and square function in numpy. I know this is far from a numpy expert so any help would be most appreciated. Thanks A: How about something like this? `In [33]: x` `Out[33]: array([0, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9])` `In [34]: grad_func(x)` `Out[34]: array([9., 24., 45., 64., 81., 98., 115., 132., 159., 174.])` `In [35]: (grad_func(x).reshape(-1)2)` `Out[35]: array([9., 81., 288., 648., 990., 1332., 1584., 2088., 2562.])` And the function: `def grad_func(X):` `grad_func_name = 'grad_func'` `grad_func_args = (X,)` 0cc13bf012

It's a big boom and I think people would love it. When they call you for a price on an item it's a bit tricky for you to say, "Well I can't tell ya how much because I need more information about the time frame you're looking to ship."

Wolsey, whose body was returned from the Vatican's mausoleum, a six-minute walk from the prime minister's residence, was placed in a coffin "dedicated to his service", Bishop Robert Wainwright, the Roman Catholic Bishop of Crediton, said, as he unveiled the coffin. The funeral will take place at 11.30am tomorrow, said a statement released by Wainwright and the prime minister. "He'll go in the first car with the family," said Wainwright. "No service in Westminster Abbey. It would have been too disrespectful. It's a very important ritual. A Catholic funeral happens once every generation." Norman Kirk, the Cabinet member for religious affairs and the Church of England, said it was a "simple" service. "
